Science Week

Today S6 had a visit from Peter Hatfield from Oxford University. Peter spoke to them about Astrophysics and his career in science. They also thought about how they might respond if aliens got in touch. Apparently they are leaving it to the scientists to sort!

Many thanks to Peter for coming in and sharing his work and experiences with us.

If you would like to share your science stories with us through talks, activities, mentoring or just your science story for us to put up around the department, please get in touch with Mrs Powell. l.powell@europaschool.uk.

There were two volleyball matches during last weekend.

Saturday ESUK boys played against the Oxford adult mixed team. Eventually more structured and experienced Oxford team won all 5 sets, but our boys had put up some excellent resistance. Especially Oliver Mohr-Knox and Albin Uhlich were showing some very high standard of game.

On Sunday the girls volleyball team played their second test match against the Oxford girls team. Our girls had shown an excellent improvement and won this match 3:2 on sets. The ESUK girls team was playing very well and all the girls who took part did excellent job. Well done! Particularly the captain Louève Roggero had a fantastic match scoring lot of points both from the serve and her outside hitter position.

Four students from S2 and S3 achieved excellent results in the Regional Final of the UK Maths Team Challenge, held 11th March in the Mathematics Institute of Oxford University. The team - Aidan Groth, Dennis Baractaru, Isaac Thomas and Sam Matthews - came second out of seventeen schools.
