S6 Careers and Higher Education

S6 had their second mentoring session last week. I'd like to take this opportunity to thank all of the wonderful mentors. The feedback from the session was very positive:

'It was really good! It's really helpful for us, because we are still young but we have to look after our future. So these sessions are really interesting to find what to do in the future, and make better our choices or visions about the world of universities'.

'I was very pleased with what I had learnt' Jonah S6

A small group of S6s were also fortunate to be invited to a Thinking Skills workshop at Trinity College, Oxford on Wednesday last week. - Mrs Lindsay Powell - Careers Co-ordinator

Careers In Creative Arts

On Wednesday last week I, and all of S1, were honoured to be able to meet and question James Butler, a layout artist currently part of a small team of animators working hard to produce the famous Peppa Pig episodes that everyone has most certainly heard of. He was able to tell us about his experience of working as a freelance animator for ten years and his transition to the Peppa Pig productions. James explained that his aim is to educate people about the importance and magnitude of the creative industry's footprint on the world's economy and that now, more than ever, there is a high demand for artists and creators. This goes to show that the creative sector of education should be more widely respected and supported. This talk gave us a useful insight on the current job opportunities for someone interested in the creative industry while also, more interestingly, teaching us about how animations are produced at the Peppa Pig productions.
